DEFINITIONS:
Project Preceptor – A preceptor is an individual who provides direct oversight and supervision to scholar on their summer projects. A project preceptor is the content mentor who guides the scholar in research, clinical, or advocacy activities. A Project Preceptor is generally not involved in direct academic or career development. A preceptor may oversee one or multiple scholars.

Mentor – A mentor is an individual who is responsible for providing support, counseling, or encouragement related to academic, career, and professional development for the scholar during (and after) their assignment. Mentors may be asked to write letters of recommendation or work with scholars on publications and projects following their formal participation in Center for Diversity programs.

Mentor Coach – A mentor coach serves as academic and professional development mentor who may not necessarily have expertise in science, clinical, or advocacy areas. The mentor meets weekly with the scholar, however the Mentor Coach does not supervise or offer a research, clinical, or advocacy project for the scholar. Mentor Coaches assist scholars in navigating their learning environment and developing the scholar's final presentation.
Project Preceptor/Mentor - A Project Preceptor/Mentor serves as BOTH Project Preceptor and Mentor.
